

CHAPTER XXIX.

I Open the Safe.

"It is true," she murmured. true, and too horrible."

"It is impossible

Can one deny a fact? Am La child the safe was not closed. to be solaced with smooth words? 1 desgraced brothe

It is always painful to see one whom prived her for the moment of all there. She will gain strength from not tell her my belief that I held the combination of the safe, and that before many minutes were passed I turned from the room she had left. might have the papers in my posses-

The woman who tortuced us both room Helena had just left, a malevoleat feure in her hour of triumph. As I looked toward her, tempted to expel her brutally from that room, and if my surmise was false, to force from ber, even by violence, if necessary, the combination of the safe, she withdrew hastily, leaving Helena and myself alone. It was then that I feared the worst. She had appealed to Helena. She was confident of her suc-

Still I held Helena's hands tightly in none. I wished to give back to her her noise, ber calm courage.

Mr. Haddon," she whispered preseatly, "do you think-is it possibleto do this thing?

It is possible; but it would be the act of a madman and a liar," I said gently.

"You say it is possible." She withdraw her hands almost roughly. Her voice was monotonous and harsh. Then you will save us, mother and myself, from this deep disgrace."

There is no service that I would not do for you, Miss Brett, that would bring you peace and happiness-"

Peace! Happiness!" she interrupted with flerce remonstrance. "I do not look for peace or happiness. Honor itself-and the motto of the Bretts 14 Honor, My Sword'-can no longer he our proud boast. But if slience can be purchased it must be. I dare not let my brother's name be held in reproach. I dure not, I cannot, for his mother's nake, let it be known that he has been believed to Ragiand We may the eye him if-"

"Yes." broke in with a strange exultancy that was even more dreadful to me than her despair, "and it is you whom I have despised that is to save us. A life for a life-those were the words I said to you at Lucerne. New it is to be dishonor for dishonor. I am asking you a terrible sacrifice. I am dragging you with me to the depths. But there is no other to help

Your grief robs you of your reason," I said gently. "Escape is not to be found in that way. It is the last hope of a desperate and unscrupulous adventuress, who has herself little hope of success. It is her last card, and she will lose nothing by playing But we, you and I, we risk every-

us. Say that you will."

'Ah, you refuse! You are afraid of the risks. I might have known you would be afraid. That woman said I heard the woman without call my sons must not know of Sir Mortimer's so heroic from one who was a proven beating against the door. - Oh, forgive me, I did not mean to way that. "Miss Brett, I think there is no disgrace I would not gladly endure to help you. I swore to rescue your large compartment. It was empty them, would be not read them? prother's honor if it were possible. If myself, I tell you I would. More than the safe. Two packets were there. that, though every instinct tells me ask even now-

"Heaven bless you!" brokenly

But first of all I want you to realize ctearly just what you are asking. I side want you to be quite sure that you are not adding dishonor to dishonor in the open window. asking me to do this thing. No: it is not that I am afcafd. I have not that kind of fear. But I think that neither stupefied. of us should be so cowardly as to yield yourself, when you see him, if it is me with a cold smile. merely the merciful hand of death that has smoothed his forehead, or whether stammered. the calm and serenity is that of a man or, My Sword.'

cause one wishes to. It still seemed for my taste."

my wild conjecture. I dared not raise knob. her hopes at the risk of a speedy disflusionment. Once the papers were in my possession, together we could defy Madanie de Varnier. And if disappointment was to be mine I hoped, would recover her courage and clear

Again I was alone. But Madame de Varnier who had awaited the result of Helena's intercession, now came to-Do not believe it," I said obstinate- ward me. I saw with a thrill of thankfulness that the door of the room of "You told me that it would be for have seen; I must believe, though God her to decide," she said confidently. knows the truth makes me wish a hun- "I know that she has decided. And fred times that I lay beside my poor your own decision? Does your resolution falter?"

we respect the pray of an emotion un- pace the floor with rapid steps, ad- hostess does not vouchsafe to her controlled. It was doubly painful for vancing nearer and nearer to the room guest the key of her strong box. If I Brett. me to see this strong woman, whose of the safe. "She has not yet de- were not Sir Mortimer, I must be in dominant quality was courage and cided. I believe with all my heart that league with Madame de Varnier and caim, writhe under the blow that de. she will refuse. She is in your oratory Dr. Starva, drawn the bolt. Another and I was on bination. C-O-W-A-R-D.

pulled at the handle.

had been a victim of my own madness am among friends." His sardonic smile took in Madame de Varnier and myself, who had not yet recovered poses from our astonishment.

Indeed, it was rather embarrass ment that held me speechless. Presontly he would know that it was not at the safe. And knowing that, it was inevitable that he mistake me for one of the conspirators. First of all at Vitznau-I had taken dispatches from his hand. Had I indeed been really under the influence of an opiate I might have urged that as the reason. could have said that I was not conscious of any deception; I was simply a victim of Dr. Starva and Madame de Varnier, and not responsible for my nets.

But not only had I not taken the opiate, but Madame de Varnier knew that I had not, and even had I wished to tell the lie she would have contradicted me.

And now he had caught me redhanded at the safe. He would draw his conclusions swiftly. It would be absurd to suppose that I should know the combination of the safe, merely "You are mistaken." I began to as Madame de Varnier's guest. A

That was the conclusion he must arpower to think coherently. I dared the presence of the dead to defy you," rive at. To tell him the absolute truth "Perhaps," sneered the woman. She -that by one chance out of ten thouseated herself near the table slightly sand I had stumbled on the combination-would only deepen his convic-An instant and I had gained it, and tion as to my guilt.

And Helena? What would she my knees, my fingers tremblingly think? Would her faith in me be so atood at the threshold of the little whirling about the shining surface of strong that she would believe me? the little knob that controlled the com- Had Captain Forbes not surprised me nance. at this moment my guessing of the riddle of the safe would have seemed I whirled it this way and that, then miraculous indeed, but the fact that I had the papers, and could place them It resisted my efforts. A cold per- in her hands to be destroyed, would spiration broke out on my forehead. I support my story readily enough.

But I dare not give to her these Pat again I moved the knob; this papers before Captain Forbes and time slowly, with infinite care, with Madame de Varnier? It seemed to me

"C-O-W-A-R-D."

Once more I turned the handle. It with the exception of a jewel case. I And Madame de Varnier? To what I seized them greedily. I was about pers in my hand.

He had made his entrance through

"Good evening, Sir Mortimer!" I rose to my feet, staring at him

"I am sorry if my abrupt and unto this woman's demands. In the ora-tory youder lies your broth. Ask you," he said mockingly, and regarded Forbes moved in an obstinate channel. "You have managed to escape?"

who held the motto of his house, 'Hon- convenience you. With your permission, sir, I will withdraw the bolt. This back to Downing street with the This appeal was perhaps not wholly little room reminds me too well of the proofs of Sir Mortimer's guilt. sincere. One cannot deny facts be one I have just left. It is too cramped ne that it must be true that Sir He brushed by me brusquely and Mortimer was proven guilty of taking drew the bolt. I thrust the papers in Each of us had simple reason to feel my breast pocket. With one motion III at ease. Nor did I dare tell Helena now of I closed the safe softly, and turned the

CHAPTER XXX.

that it was hopeless to ask a service name in a frenzy of rage, her hands guilt. For though the papers, the proof, was in our possession, the fact remained. And if Captain Forbes yielded to my touch. The safe was knew that I was not Sir Mortimer Brett, but an impostor, would be not I saw no papers of any sort in the demand those papers? And having

Censon

I could do so now, though I sacrificed shpped out a drawer, the only one in extremes would she not go in her rage? Now she believed that in some way I had been cognizant of Captain that I should fail, I will do what you to open them, when a shadow fell Forbe's escape, and had gone to the across the room. There was a light room containing the safe to give him step behind me. I looked up, the pa- assistance. But when she knew, as she must presently, that I had taken Captain Forbes was standing by my the papers from the safe I could not doubt that she would not submit meek-She would have her revenge, both on Helena and on myself. She would insist on telling Captain Forbes of Sir Mortimer's guilt. He would demand from me the pa pers and my cieverness would have Duty to him was a soldier's first impulse. In doing what he thought his duty, he would sacrifice all. Not Hel-"Exactly; and I hope I do not in- ena's tears, nor my own entreaties, would prevent him from hurrying

> For some seconds after we had reached the large anteroom, the three of us stood like so many wax figures.

"I have the honor to report to your Excellency," said Forbes at length, in a voice that was admirably controlled despite his indignation, "that the sec ond dispatch—a dispatch of profound importance, as I warned your Excel-Captain Forbes passed into the lency at Vitznau-was stolen from me plice defends him." that by the bier of her brother Helena larger room. I followed him slowly. | last night May I express the hope

"Ah, that's better," he sighed. "Now | that your Excellency has received to?" "No," I said calmly. It was time to

> "Then possibly madam can enlighten you as to its whereabouts."

Sir Mortimer whom he had surprised not so deeply in your Excellency's kinder to umpires than they used counsel."

> "My patience, Sir Mortimer," cried dispatch which I am unable to deliver | ited by it in more ways than one. to you because of your condition. The dispatch, I am held captive; the dis- upon the stage. patch is forcibly taken from me. When I ask you if you have received it, you raved through his endless speeches, give me an indifferent answer. I dare | dodging an enion or a baseball every nance these violent acts of a bandit. able to dodge,

But I must insist-" He paused abruptly. I thought it because he realized that his anger had heavy boot, and the actor, thoroughly carried him too far. But when I alarmed, started to retreat. looked where he looked, I saw Helena pained surprise, "I am sorry to see you here.

"And I am infinitely relieved, though bewildered, to find you, Captain Forbes." She extended him her hand, smiling wanly.

"But you will help me to make your brother realize the danger of further misunderstanding," he said gently, his anger at my indifference vanishing at sight of her pale and haggard counte-"My brother, Captain Forbes, is dead. He lies in that room," she answered firmly, though her lips trem-

She had made her decision. She, too, was determined at all hazards not to act a lie

As for Captain Forbes, he was dumb with astonishment. His eyes widened the calmness that comes with despair. that the king's messenger of all per- with dismay and concern. But though he did not speak his startled glance dwelt on me.

"Mr. Haddon is my loyal friend," sald Helena, interpreting his look. At the same time she reassured me with a quiet smile that more than her words expressed her trust. A slow flush of anger mounted to the temples of the king's messenger. He towered over me menacingly. "You have dared tamper with his Majesty's business; you have tricked one of his servants. By Heaven, you will rue it dearly!" "Captain Forbes!" Helena laid her hand on his sleeve in her distress.

"Madam!" He turned on her indignantly. "This man has deliberately passed himself off as your brother. He tricked me into giving him important papers of state. You know that, and you defend him? You dare call him friend?"

"I did not know that," she replied firmly. "But I dare call him friend, Captain Forbes. You do not understand-

"Understand!" he stormed, before I could make any reply myself. "I understand this only too well: he is in league with a notorious woman, and the still more infamous Dr. Starva, two Bulgarian adventurers of the most dangerous type. I think that is the other ills to which human flesh is enough. That he has obtained under false pretenses my dispatches convicts him of high treason. He will not leave my sight until he is placed under arrest "I am an American," I said quietly, "You may find it more difficult to do that than you imagine.

My mild expostulation maddened him only the more.

"An American?" He advanced to me as if to lay hands on me, "Do you flatter yourself that your nationality traitor with impunity? Give me those papers.'

He came a step nearer. Instinctive ly I placed my hands at my breast pocket as if to protect the precious papers. But again Helena, distressed at his violence, restrained him. "Captain Forbes," she pleaded, "pray estrain your anger. It is natural that you should feel the deepest suspicion against Mr. Haddon. But if you will be patient, I am sure he will make all clear to you.

"Miss Brett," he said sternly, "this a man's work. It is hardly becoming in you to defend one who has traduced your brother's honor. How dare ou claim an impostor like this as friend? He must be indeed a clever villain to have so deceived you."

"Mr. Haddon has done enough," she answered proudly, "to justify my faith in him. And let me tell you, Captain Forbes, that I believe in his word so implicitly that I have given him my word that until midnight to-night I shall neither question his motives nor interfere with any action of his. Nor shall I permit another to act on my behalf.

Indignation and surprise fought for mastery, as Forbes answered with resolution:

"I shall refuse to obey you, Miss Brett. You forget that it is not yourself who has been wronged so much as Sir Mortimer and myself. Now, sir, give me those papers that you took from the safe." For the first time Madame de Varnier, shocked into rigid attention, spoke. Her surprise a the demand forced from her a contemptuous defense of myself. "You are mad!" she cried involuntarily "You see, Miss Brett," exclaimed Forbes, with satisfaction, "his accom-

(TO BE CONTINUED)

NOT THE TIME TO STOP.

put an end to this game of cross-pur- Manager Saw the Possibilities in the Situation.

Jim Johnstone, the famous base-"I, your Excellency? Oh, no!" She ball umpire, said recently in New swept me a mocking courtesy. "I am York that baseball crowds were far to be.

"This is true of theater crowds, Forbes, breaking into direct speech, too," said Mr. Johnstone. "Why, with "has its limits. I see you at Lucerne provincial touring companies in the only with the greatest difficulty. I past, maltreatment was regularly exwarn you of the grave purport of a pected. In fact, the companies prof-"I know of a company that was next morning, when I would see you. playing 'The Broken Vow' in Paint you have disappeared again. I trace Rock, a one night stand. The audiyou here with difficulty. When for the ence didn't like 'The Broken Vow,' and third time I attempt to deliver this eggs, cabbages and potatoes rained "Still the play went on. The hero not believe that you are so far lost to other minute, and pretty sore from your sense of duty that you counted those missiles that he hada't been "But finally a gallery auditor in a paroxysm of rage and scorn hurled a

'Keep on playing, you fool,' hissed the manager from the wings, as he "Miss Brett!" he exclaimed in hooked in the boot with an umbrella,

'Keep on till we get the other one.' " PRESCRIPTIONS IN LATIN.

lated by the Druggists.

What virtue is there in the secrecy with which the doctor hedges about his profession?

prominent place in the curriculum of spoons, and the bride sorted them into every medical school, and when strict. little groups and looked them over ly analyzed "professional etiquette" admiringly. seems to mean "doing what is best for the doctor, individually and collectively."

Among the things that "is best for the doctor" is the writing of his prescriptions in Latin, and thus keeping replied the bride, primly, the public in ignorance not only of a prescription is needed.

makes business for the doctors.

Let us say that you have the ague. You had it last year and the year before. Each time you have visited the doctor and he has prescribed for you to go downtown this very afternoon in Latin. You have never known and buy a dollar alarm clock to waken what he has given you for the disease, George in the morning." and so each time you are forced to go to him again and give him an opportunity to repeat his prescription-in Latin, and his fee-in dollars.

If you ask the doctor why he uses Latin in writing his prescriptions, why he writes "aqua" when he means water, he will give you a technical dissertation on the purity of the Latin language, and the fact that all words are derived from it, etc. It will be a dissertation that you may not be able to answer, but it will hardly convince

It would be a good thing for the public to devise a little code of ethics of its own; ethics that will be "a good thing for the public individually and collectively."

Let us apply one of the rules of this code of ethics to you, the individual. You call in the physician when you have the ague, the grippe, or any of cle for some special thing, but what heir, and which you may have again least. There were all sorts and consome day. The doctor prescribes-in ditions of forks and pronged things Latin, and you take this, to you, mean- which were not particularly ornameningless scribble to the druggist to tal and would only be useful if the have it compounded. Right here is owner knew to what to apply them. where you come in, if you are wise Say to the druggist that you want a and have him explain their uses," translation of that prescription. It is said the sister. your privilege to know what you are taking. While the doctor's code of

is yours just the same. With the translated prescription in beaves you free to play the spy and your possession you have two distinct | 11 lamps. advantages. You know what you are taking, and should you wish to call some other doctor at some time you will be able to tell him what drugs you have been putting into your system, and also if you should have the same disease again you can save yourself visit to the doctor, and his fee, by taking this translated prescription to the druggist once more and having it refilled.

ethics may not recognize this right it

Jerome on Colored Evidence. York, said one day of a piece of suspicious evidence: "It is evidence that has been tampered with, colored. It is like the lady's report of her physician's prescription. "A lady one day in July visited her physician. The man examined her and said:

'Madam, you are only a little run plenty of fresh air, and I advise you to dress in the coolest, most comfortable clothes-nothing stiff or formal.' "When she got home her husband asked her what the physician had said.

The lady replied: " 'He said I must go to the seashore, do plenty of automobiling, and get me new summer gowns."

Great Discovery Announced

Sir William Crookes, as a result of his own researches and the experiments of Professors Krowalski and Moscicki, of Freiburg university, has discovered a process of extracting nitric acid from the atmosphere. The process is available for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes. and is expected to revolutionize the nitrate industry and the world's food

Where Russia Is Behind. only 55 churches for a similar num- rest of the year only 400.

WEDDING GIFTS The Happy Bride Takes

an Inventory

The bride had returned from her trip and was about to spend a long. happy morning looking over her wedding presents and finding out what she had really received. Before the great day she had been so excited and ushed that she had no time to examine her treasures closely, although she remembered, as in a dream, writing a large number of notes of acknowledgment. Then, too, 70 gifts had come after she had gone away. The bride went into the room where he presents were arranged on all the tables the house afforded and two corrowed from neighbors, and separated the sheep from the lambs. The first thing which caught her eye were a number of nunch glasses. She counted them and found there were 440 in all. "They will be awfully nice when you give a ball," said her sister, who was accompanying her on this voyage of discovery. The bride admitted that they would. "But you see, dear," she said thoughtfully, "our apartment has only five rooms and a bath, and the little library table is but 16 by 20 feet, so The Public Should Have Them Trans that it will probably be some years before I can invite 440 people to take dinner with me, or even give a 'small and early' dance to that number." The sister giggled, and they inspected the coffee spoons, which came next "Professional etiquette" occupies a on the table. There were 48 coffee

"I will use them by turns," she said. "This set first, then that, and so on." "Why not have them exchanged for something else?" asked the sister. "I don't think that would be nice,"

There were 17 cut-glass bonbon what it is taking for its ills, but forc- disher and 20 bonbon spoons. There ing a call upon the doctor each time were 36 silver knives which the bride said were ple knives and her sister In plain and unmistaltable English declared should be used either for the writing of prescriptions in Latin lee cream or fish, or both, as occasion demanded.

> There were 11 clocks. "We can put two in each room." said the bride, "and I mustn't forget

"These are the puzzles," explained table laden with silver implements. "Each member of the family has been given three guesses as to the identity of each but we haven't succeeded in making them all out yet." The bride took up the implements one by one, kultted her brows and puzzled over them.

"This looks to me like something to eat asparagus with," she said, refer I have something to say to you."

ring to a gnarled specimen. "Oh! we've guessed that," replied wife?" the sister; "that is a combination cork-screw and bottle-opener and ice pick, and it is solid silver. It was easy, but just try your brains on this." "This" resembled nothing so much as a dynamite bomb with a fussy top. It was evidently intended as a recentathe bride could not make out in the

"I should take them to a jeweler

"I will," acquiesced the bride, "Perhaps he will know, though I doubt it. Did I get any doylies or embroidered things for the table?"

"No, but you are the happy owner of "And there is both electric light and gas in the apartment. Still, when we build a summer home they will come in nicely. I hope we received some pictures. "No, no pictures, but 14 trays of various sorts and conditions."

"Any furniture?" "Certainly not; people don't give such things, but you received 11 pepper pots."

"We will certainly have a spicy District Attorney Jerome, of New life," sighed the bride. "I had hoped some one would send me a tea table." "It seems to me you are awfully ungrateful," said the sister.

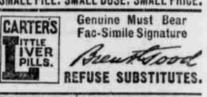

"I am not," contradicted the bride. "I love everything I have. They are all perfectly lovely, and I wouldn't part with one of them for the world. am merely taking an inventory. Tell you what I will do. I will go right down town and find out what these down. You need frequent baths and things are intended for and-and-er -if you don't think it would be dreadful, I will take a basketful of duplicates along and exchange them for articles I did not get. You are sure you don't think it will be dreadful? But what will the givers say when they come to call and don't find their gifts? You honestly don't think it will matter? Well, then, come with me and we will exchange the lamps for tablecloths and some of those silver spoons for a bread tray, and seven pie knives for a carving set. I don't expect to have a great amount of pie-George doesn't like it."

> India's Great Summer Resort. The season for business and pleas-are in Simia and the other summer resorts in the Himalayas is from the middle of April to the end of September. During that period the government is removed from Calcutta to England has 144 churches for every Simla. During the hot months there 100,000 people. In Russia there are 4,000 white people in Simla; the these Little Pills. (They also relieve Die ligestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect ren edy for Dizziness, Nat Taste in the Mouth, Coat ed Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER.

They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Sure to Have One.

Lincoln Steffens, in an address on municipal politics, said in Chicago of a certain city:

"That city is as notorious for its rottenness as the town of Pebbles is notorious for another characteristic. "Here is an incident that will give you an idea of the reputation of Pebblos. "On a train one day a man rushed into a car, held up his hand for attention, and shouted excitedly: "'Anybody here who belongs to Pebbles?

"'Aye; I do,' said a small, dry old fellow calmly. "'Then,' said the other, 'lend us yer corkscrew."

She Experimented. A little girl of five was taken to church one Sunday, and listened with unexpected attention to the sermon, which graphically told the story of the stilling of the tempest on the Sea of Galilee, and how Christ walked on the waves. In the afternoon her mother missed her and began an anxious search of the house. As she neared the bathroom she heard sounds of splashing, and hurried to the door to behold a small, excited face peering over the rim of the big white tub, and to hear a small, excited voice exclaim: "Say, mamma, this walking on the water is quite a trick."

Time to Fly.

The trust magnate leaped up from the banquet table and made a dive for his 100-mile-an-hour automobile. "Hold on!" cried the astonished toastmaster. "Won't you wait for us to serve the dessert?" "No," replied the nervous magnate; "I just saw a suspicious face loom up the sister, as the twain approached a at the window. The next thing served will be a process." And telling his chauffeur to put on full speed the wealthy fugitive headed for the next state.

Pointed Conversation.

"Jack, I am going away." "Going away, Madge?" "Yes, going away. But before I go "Something to say to me, little "Yes, something to say to you. Don't send me any poker stories in lieu of the weekly remittance. That'll be about all.'

Evil of Tipping System. Although there is a great effort made to keep secret the thefts in hotels and ts in New York, it is quite evident they are on a rapid increase. The manager of a large restaurant says the system of having servants depend almost entirely upon patrons for their pay lowers their moral standard and causes them to look on those they are supposed to serve as their legitimate prey. Not What She Wanted. Lawyer-Yes, my dear young lady, you have a perfect case. If you wish,

I can secure you a divorce without publicity in six months.

Eliot.

Young Lady-But, my dear sir, you don't understand at all. I am an You must love your work and not be always looking over the edge of it wanting your play to begin.-George

FEET OUT. She Had Curious Habits

When a person has to keep the feet out from under cover during the coldest nights in winter because of the heat and prickly sensation, it is time that coffee, which causes the trouble,

There is no end to the nervous conditions that coffee will produce. It shows in one way in one person and in another way in another. In this case the lady lived in S. Dak. She says: "I have had to lie awake half the night with my feet and limbs but of the bed on the coldest nights, and felt afraid to sleep for fear of catching cold. I had been troubled for years with twitching and jerking of the lower limbs, and for most of the time

I have been unable to go to church or to lectures because of that awful feeling that I must keep on the move. When it was brought to my attention that coffee caused so many nervous diseases, I concluded to drop coffee and take Postum Food Coffee to see if my trouble was caused by coffee drinking. "I only drank one cup of coffee for breakfast but that was enough to do the business for me. When I quit it my troubles disappeared in an almost miraculous way. Now I have no more of the jerking and twitching and can sleep with any amount of bedding over me and sleep all night, in sound, peaceful rest. "Postum Food Coffee is absolutery worth its weight in gold to me. "There's a Reason." Read the little health classic, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.